Costumes on Camera
Do your kids just love to dress up as super heroes or princesses? Let their imaginations run free by participating in The Super Hero/Princess Project, started by Washington, D.C., photographer Marissa Rauch. She provides all the props and costumes, and your kids can ninja chop or princess wave their way through a photo shoot. The moments captured can be immortalized through photos, books, cups, T-shirts and life-sized prints. Call 202-337-4598 today to schedule a sitting. marissarauchphotography.com

Jewish Primary Day School Plans Expansion
The Jewish Primary Day School of the Nation’s Capital, the only Jewish day school in Washington, D.C., is planning to expand through the purchase of a new building at 4715 16th Street NW, one mile from its current campus. The pre-K-6th-grade school will pursue a phased growth of up to 350 students, from its current enrollment of 273 students, by admitting three kindergarten classes per year. The expansion is aided by a $3 million donation, and the move will occur around December 2013. For details, visit jpds.org.

Cycle for Survival
Make a difference in the fight against cancer by registering to ride with your friends and family in Cycle for Survival, a nationwide indoor team cycling event. The funds raised support research led by Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center into rare cancer, including pancreatic, brain and pediatric cancers. Cycle For Survival will be held 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. February 12 at Equinox Bethesda. For more information, event rules or to register, visit cycleforsurvival.org.

Empty Bowls 2011
You can be a part of the fight against hunger by sharing a simple dinner of bread and hearty soup served in a handmade bowl. Empty Bowls 2011 is an event planned by Interfaith Works, 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. December 7 at VisArts in Rockville. Participants pay an admission fee ($25/adults, $10/kids 10 and younger) and dine on a simple meal. Each person keeps the handmade bowl as a reminder of how many bowls remain empty, even in Montgomery County. iworksmc.org
